

Having worked with Janet for a number of years, I watched her progress from a University Student to an excellent consultant, who has the level of professionalism and diligence you would expect from someone who spent her developing years with PwC. I had no hesitation in calling upon her to help me with a recent project working on behalf of one of the major banks.

The bank were owed a considerable amount of money by their client through invoice discounting and overdraft facilities and the company was placed into Administration in Jan 2010, a new company was formed and they were retained to recover the outstanding debts. And although money was being received, it was not on track as we had expected and the staff began to lose some momentum and focus.

As we had auditing restrictions it was impossible for us to get involved to the extent that was required, therefore I contact Janet and asked her if she could work on site for a few weeks, to re-focus the staff using her most proficient skills which are: her ability to fit into all scenarios: her motivational skills and her people skills, from the most senior of the client staff to the most junior of the project staff, she will go out of her way to ensure that everyone is kept involved.

The project was a resulting success with the bank being paid out in full, and they have also told us they would have no hesitation in using Janet again on similar projects.
